PREFACE

The final volume of The Collected Works of Abraham Lincoln went to press in 1952, the First Supplement in 1974. This Second Supplement contains items that have surfaced since 1974. They run, as in the First Supplement, to the routine and minor item more generally than was true in The Collected Works.

For performing the basic task of collecting the new items, we are indebted to the Library of Congress and the Illinois State Historical Library. To these institutions especially, but also to those other institutions and private persons listed in annotations as holders of the manuscripts, are due the thanks of the editors.

Our work could not have been undertaken without the generous cooperation of others: most notably, Lincoln and Civil War Specialist, Oliver H. Orr, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress; and Lincoln Curator Thomas F. Schwartz, Illinois State Historical Library. We owe a special thanks to Mr. Schwartz and the University of Illinois Press for their permission to use the annotations to about a dozen items published in his "Lincoln's Published Writings: A History and Supplement," The Journal of the Abraham Lincoln Association, Vol. 9 (1987). Thanks are also due Ms. Andrine Basler Cleaver for assistance in copy work.

My father, Roy P. Basler, died before we could put the finishing touches on this Second Supplement, but we had already done almost all of the work of selecting items for inclusion and writing annotations. The labor was divided between us according to our respective abilities, his as a Lincoln scholar, mine as an editor (though I am a lawyer by profession).

Our guidelines for selection and annotation content were those set forth in the First Supplement, and I shall repeat them here so far as they remain applicable. The continuing effort has been to collect all extant unpublished writings or public utterances of Abraham Lincoln that come within the scope defined in the Foreword to The Collected Works. Manuscripts in Lincoln's handwriting are included, with two exceptions: (1) copies made by Lincoln of the compositions of others for transmittal or preservation in his own file, and (2) law cases and documents appertaining thereto (e.g., receipts for fees, affidavits, declarations, praecipes).

Manuscripts and documents not in Lincoln's handwriting but bearing his signature, or signed for him by his authority, have been included, with certain exceptions. The following have not been included unless particular significance of content or circumstances demanded their presence: acts of Congress, treaties, commissions, authorizations, appointments, pardons, land grants, checks, ships' papers, certificates of service, credences, discharge papers, military orders (except those personally drafted by Lincoln or primarily his), draft orders, routine letters and endorsements of transmittal, routine pardon and clemency endorsements (such as "Let this man take the oath of December 8, 1863, and be discharged"), approvals, letters written and signed by his secretaries, form replies to requests for an autograph, and nominations to office submitted to the United States Senate. With regard to the last category, nominations, it was decided that such routine and repetitive communications usually should be excluded, since they are in print in the Executive Journal of the United States Senate.

Public utterances not available in manuscript have been included from contemporary newspaper sources, even when only fragmentary reports have been found.

In gleaning from photocopies of innumerable dealers' catalogues, we most certainly have overlooked some items and have purposely excluded some for reasons of fragmentariness, illegibility, or insignificance. But if we have erred, it is probably more on the side of inclusion rather than exclusion. Our objective has been to be useful. One category of deliberately excluded items, already amply represented in The Collected Works, are the numerous orders, signed by but not written by Lincoln, permitting cotton dealers to import Confederate cotton through the lines. These have been most adequately treated by Ludwell H. Johnson, III, "Trading with the Enemy; Some New Lincoln Documents," Manuscripts, Vol. XXIX, No. 1, 1987, pp. 29-39.

Other details of the policy and practice followed in producing this volume may be found in the Foreword to The Collected Works. One detail, however, should be reiterated here. In editing the text of a manuscript, whether Lincoln's or that of another quoted in the annotation of Lincoln's text, we have endeavored to reproduce the original even in idiosyncrasies of spelling, punctuation, etc., placing editorial emendations in brackets, but avoiding sic so far as possible.

PREFACE

Where proper names have been misspelled, the annotation contains the corrected spelling, insofar as we have been able to verify the name.

In The Collected Works one major concern was to provide in the footnotes, upon the first appearance of a proper name, an identification of each person mentioned in Lincoln's writings, and to furnish, when available, as much information as is necessary to an understanding of the text. Repetition of these identifications in this volume seemed unnecessary, although we have identified new names when possible. Contemporary records of all kinds have been utilized in this process, and when an answer was not forthcoming, a note to that effect has usually been given.

To J. M. McCalla¹

Will Mr. McCalla please examine these papers, and inform me whether anything, and if so, what, can be done in the case?

Jan'y 24, 1848

A. LINCOLN, of HR.

¹ ALS, IHi. McCalla was the second auditor in the Treasury Department. No clue exists as to the case Lincoln mentions.

To the Patent Office¹

Dear Judge

[December 1848]

You see by the above that a copy of a certain Patent is wanted. Please make it out and send it to me, together with this letter.

Yours as ever,

To Moses Hampton¹

Charleston, Illinois June 1, 1849

At last I concluded to take the General Land-Office if I can get it. I have come to this conclusion, more to prevent what would be generally bad for the party here, and particularly bad for me, than a positive desire for the office. Will you please write old Zach (not

Hon. J. R. Underwood

Springfield, Ills.

Dear Sir:

June 3, 1849

You may remember that while at Washington I sought to have you recommend Mr. Cyrus Edwards, of this state, for Commissioner of the General Land Office-- Though not much disinclined, I believe you had not done so when I left. I think it probable, you have since--I have received a Telegraphic despach from Washington of the 1st Inst saying a Mr. Butterfield of Chicago, will be appointed, unless prevented by the use of my own name--Mr. B. though entirely competent, so far as I know, is not recommended by any citizen of this state directly for the office, and we feel that should he receive it, we are emphatically under a foreign guardianship,--This, you know, men rebel against--The despach says the appointment has been postponed three weeks in order that our state may be heard from--As against him, I desire the office; and while I shall rely chiefly upon recommendations from home, I wish to make it appear, if I can, that I was not greatly under par, for one of my limited acquaintance, and brief career, while at Washington. For the latter object, I shall be very grateful if you will write the President as pretty a letter for me, as in your judgment the truth will permit. If you write, so frame the letter as to save whatever chance, Mr. Edwards, or anyone else you may have recommended, may yet have. Not a moment of time is to be lost.

To Thomas Ewing¹

Hon. Secretary of the Interior

Washington,

Dear Sir,

June 22, 1849

This morning, on my mentioning to you, I had an intimation my old friend, Cyrus Edwards, had placed on file, something ill-natured against me, you had the kindness, as I remember, to volunteer the remark, in my defence, that but for my devotion to Mr. Edwards, manifested by withholding my own name for his benefit, I would now, in your opinion, be the commissioner. If, in this, my memory serves me correctly, you will greatly oblige me, by saying as much on paper, with anything additional to the same point, which may occur to you. It will enable me, I think, to remove from the mind of one of my most highly valued friends, a bad impression, which is now the only thing most painful to me personally, in this whole matter.

JULY 9, 1849

To Thomas Ewing[1]

Hon. Secretary of the Interior

Springfield, Ills.

Dear Sir

July 9, 1849

The day after the appointment of Mr. Butterfield as Commissioner of the General Land Office you at my request delivered to me, the papers on file in my favor for the same office. They were handed me in a package sealed up; and I did not open them till yesterday. I was surprised to find amongst them no letters from Hon. R. W. Thompson, or Hon. Elisha Embree, late Whig members of Congress from two of the Wabash districts in Indiana. Both these gentlemen had informed me by letter, that they had written the President in my behalf, and had sent me copies of their letters to him, which copies I had at Washington and still have. I would have filed the copies only but that I was told by Mr. Coffee or Mr. Addison (I forget which) that the original was on file already. Something of the contents of one of them was mentioned by my informant, which corresponding with my copy, left me in no doubt but that he had really seen the original. I write this to ascertain if I can, how those originals got off the file, and to have them sent me, if they can be found. I relied upon, and valued, them more than any other two letters I had because of the high standing of the writers, because of their location within the Public Land states, and because they did (what few other members of Congress could) speak of my character and standing at home. On discovering they were missing from the file, a remark of Judge Collamer occurred to me. On the same afternoon of the appointment he said to me, that Mr. B. appeared to be better recommended from the Public Land states than I. I felt sure he was mistaken; yet, never disposed to wrestle with the court after the case is decided, I made no reply. If these letters were not before the cabinet, the judge was nearer right than I supposed. With them, I had the State of Indiana clearly; without them Mr. B. had it. The letter of Mr. Thompson was a recantation from Mr. B. to me: so that without it, I not only lost him, but he stood in full life, recommending Mr. B. I show the exact bearing of these letters, as an excuse for my anxiety to know how they, in particular, happen to be missing. One other letter, which I supposed to be on file, I do not find, but I have not so great a certainty it ever was filed.

Will you please write me on receipt of this?

To Thomas Ewing¹

Hon. Secretary of the Interior

Springfield, Ills.

Dear Sir

July 27th, 1849

Yours of the 18th in answer to my inquiries concerning the letters of Messrs. Thompson & Embree is received, and for which I thank you. You are deceived—to some extent at least—Mr. Coffee did not inform me at the time he gave me the bundle, or at any time, that any letters, filed in my favor, had been retained. He did not give me the bundle in person, but it was sent to my lodgings, accompanied by a letter from yourself, which letter, now before me, contains no indication that any of the letters had been retained. On the contrary it speaks of the papers as an “unbroken series numbered from 75 to 183 inclusive, with a small package filed at a late hour on yesterday.”

Again, if the letters of Messrs. Thompson & Embree, were retained under the rule you state then that rule was applied with a strange partiality in this case, for I have now under my eye, taken from the bundle mentioned, each with the brief upon it marked in your office eight letters falling completely within that rule. Five of them are addressed to the President, one to a third person & two to yourself; all speak of Mr. B. in the same tone as Messrs. Thompson & Embree and none of them was ever in my possession, till they came to me in the bundle referred to. But the strangest of all is, that one of these eight letters, now before me, is the identical letter of A. G. Henry, which you expressly state in your letter, has been retained by you or by Mr. Coffee under the rule. Because of these things I have ventured to say you are deceived.

SEPTEMBER 23, 1849

Dear Sir

Oct. 13, 1849

I have just received a letter from a friend at Washington from which the following is an extract. "Again _____ told me that there was a clique in Springfield determined to prevent Butterfield's confirmation; and that Lincoln would give a thousand dollars to have it done—but, says _____, one of the company who meets with them keeps Butterfield weekly posted &C."

This annoys me a little. I am unwilling for the administration to believe or suspect such a thing. I write therefore, to assure you that I am neither privy to, nor cognizant of, any such clique and that I most potently disbelieve in the existence of any such. I opposed the appointment of Mr. B. because I believed it would be a matter of discouragement to our active, working friends here, and I opposed it for no other reason. I never did, in any true sense, want the office myself. Since Mr. B's appointment, having no personal ill-will to him, and believing it to be for the interest of the administration and our cause generally, I have constantly desired his confirmation. I have seen in the newspapers but one matter of complaint against him; and in that (the matter of the Land Warrants) I believe he is right. What I am here saying depends on my word alone; but I think Mr. B. himself, if appealed to, will not say he disbelieves me.

I suppose you know that one of my suits here is against James A. Barret. To-day he has sent in a proposal that if he can be released from 15 shares he will pay up the other 15. Of course I can do no more in this, than to notify the higher powers of it, which I hereby intend doing through you. We have consulted as to the propriety of your accepting the proposition made you by the Central Rail Road through Col. Mason.

We are both decidedly of the opinion that the proposition you made them first will be better for you than the proposition of the Central Rail Road.

This opinion of ours is founded upon the belief that it will be impossible to build up anything like a Town on your farm--that if one were laid out there the only result would be to spoil a good farm and create a nuisance. We also think that under state of feelings existing between yourself and the Rail Road and much of which will in all probability continue to exist that the sooner you sell out and part company with them the better for you.

Had you not better refer them to us to conclude this negotiation for you especially if they begin to make you new proposition.

To Jesse Olds Norton[1]

Hon: J. O. Norton

Springfield, Feb. 16, 1855

My dear Sir:

I have now been beaten one day over a week; and I am very happy to find myself quite convalescent. Your kind letter of the 20th of Jan'y I did not receive till the day before yesterday—owing, I suppose to our great snow-storm. The day after the election I wrote Washburne the particulars, tolerably fully. Through the untiring efforts of friends, among whom yourself and Washburne were chief, I finally surmounted the difficulty with the extreme Anti-Slavery men, and got all their votes, Lovejoy's included. Cook, Judd, Palmer, and Baker of Alton were the men who never could vote for a whig; and without the votes of two of whom I never could reach the requisite number to make an election. I do not mean that I actually got within two votes of the required number; but I easily enough could have done so, provided I could have assured my friends that two of the above named four would go for me. In this connection it is necessary to bear in mind that your Senator Osgood, together with Don. Morrison, Kinney & Trapp of St Clair had openly gone over to the enemy. It was Govr Matteson's manoeuvring that forced upon me and my friends the necessity of surrendering to Trumbull. He made his first successful hit by tampering with Old man Strunk. Strunk was pledged to me, which Matteson knew, but he succeeded in persuading him that I stood no chance of an election, and in getting a pledge from him to go for him as second choice. He next made similar impressions on Hills of DuPage, Parks of your town and Strawn and Day of LaSalle--at least we saw strong signs that he had, and they being old democrats, and I an old whig, I could get no sufficient access to them to sound them to the bottom. That

Matteson assured the Nebraska democrats, he could get their men after they should have made a respectable show by voting a few ballots for other men, I think there is no doubt; and by holding up to their greedy eyes this amount of capital in our ranks, it was, that he induced the Nebraska men to drop Shields and take him en masse. The Nebraska men, since Osgood's and Don's defection, had control of the Senate; and they refused to pass the resolution for going into the election till three hours before the joint session was to, and did in fact, commence. One of the Nebraska senators has since told me that they only passed the resolution when they did, upon being privately assured by the Governor that he had it all safe. I have omitted to say that it was well understood Baker would vote for Trumbull, but would go over to Matteson rather than me. Passing over the first eight ballots which you have doubtless seen, when, on the ninth, Matteson had 47--having every Nebraska man, and the Old man Strunk besides, and wanting but three of an election; and when the looser sort of my friends had gone over to Trumbull, and raised him to 35 and reduced me to 15 it struck me that Hills, Parks, Strawn, Day, and Baker, or at least some three of them would go over from Trumbull to Matteson & elect him on the tenth ballot, unless they should be kept on T. by seeing my remaining men coming on to him. I accordingly gave the intimation which my friends acted upon, electing T. that ballot. All were taken by surprise, Trumbull quite as much as any one else.

There was no pre-concert about it--in fact I think a pre-concert to that effect could not have been made. The heat of the battle, and imminent danger of Matteson's election were indispensably necessary to the result. I know that few, if any, of my remaining 15 men would have gone over from me without my direction; and I gave the direction, simultaneously with forming the resolution to do it.

It is not true, as might appear by the first ballot, that Trumbull had only five friends who preferred him to me. I know the business of all the men tolerably well, and my opinion is, that if the 51 who elected him, were compelled to a naked expression of preference between him and me, he would at the outside, have 16 and I would have the remainder. And this again would depend substantially upon the fact that his 16 came from the old democratic ranks & the remainder from the whigs. Such as preferred him, yet voted for me on the first ballotings and so on the idea that a minority among friends, ought not to stand out against a majority. Lest you might receive a different impression, I wish to say I hold Judge Parks in very high estimation; believing him to be neither knave or fool, but decidedly the reverse of both. Now, as I have called names so freely, you will of course consider this confidential.

Yours much obliged, &c.

To Lyman Trumbull¹

Hon: L. Trumbull

Springfield, June 27. 1856

Dear Sir:

Yours of the 15th was received a few days ago. It would have been easier for us here, I think, had we got McLean; but as it is, I am not without high hopes for the state. I think we shall elect Bissell, at all events—and, if we can get rid of the Filmore ticket, we shall carry the state for Fremont also.

Yesterday the Buchanan State ratification came off here. I do not think it proves much; but it really was a failure. There were not fifty--I think not thirty--persons, from other counties; and of the citizens of Sangamon, there were not more in town than there usually are on Saturdays. A week ago I presented a Bill against the I.C.R.R. Co. to their attorneys here Messrs. Stewart and Douglass. Three days ago, Mr. Douglass told me it had been laid before Executive Committee for their action. I now find that neither Executive Committee nor Mr. Douglass is to be found in the city. I was very anxious for a decision in the premises, but am now under the necessity of leaving for my home in Springfield without getting it. When a decision shall be made, will you please notify me at Springfield?

May 25, 1857

Yours of the 22nd is just received. The admiralty case now stands on appeal to the circuit court and consequently, can only be tried by Judge McLean; and I understand he will remain here only one week, commencing that first Monday of June. Of course, the other side will press for a hearing during that week.

I have just been to see Stuart & Edwards and they suggest that you see the plaintiffs lawyer in St. Louis (I forget his name) and make an arrangement with him as to a day of taking up the case, and notify us.

I do not think any defence has been presented based on the fact of Messrs Page & Bacon² having purchased under the Deed of Trust. Quere. Does not the Libellants right, attach to the specific thing—the cars--regardless of who may own them?

There is no longer any difficult question of jurisdiction in the Federal courts; they have jurisdiction in all possible cases except such as might redound to the benefit of a "nigger" in some way.

Seriously, I wish you to prepare, on the question jurisdiction as well as you can; for I fear the later decisions are against us. I understand they have some new Admiralty Books here, but I have not examined them.

House Divided Speech, June 16, 1858 Text Correction[1]

The new year of 1854 found slavery excluded from more than half the States by State Constitutions, and from most of the national territory by congressional prohibition.

Four days later, commenced the struggle, which ended in repealing that congressional prohibition.

This opened all the national territory to slavery; and was the first point gained.

But, so far, Congress only, had acted; and an indorsement by the people, real or apparent, was indispensable, to save the point already gained, and give chance for more.[2]

² This is the paragraph transposed to precede the previous three paragraphs on page 462 of Volume II. For a discussion of this error, see Don E. Fehrenbacher, Lincoln in Text and Context: Collected Essays (Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1989).

Springfield,
Aug. 6, 1858

Yesterday morning I found a drop letter from Gov. Bissell, saying partly in consequence of a letter from you, that my late speeches, or some of them, shall be printed in pamphlet form both in English and German. Having had a good many letters to the same effect, I went at once to the Journal office here and set them to work to print me in English, fifty dollars worth of my last speech at Springfield (July 17) that appearing, by what I hear to be the most "taking" speech I have made. For that sum they will furnish about seven thousand; they will at the same time print some more, on their own account, and keep the type standing for a while. I also wrote to Judd yesterday, to get the same speech done up there in German.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1858

Some things are passing strange. Wednesday morning, Douglas' paper here, the Register, went out crowing over the defeat of Blair, at St. Louis; and Blair's paper, the Missouri Democrat, comes back next day, puffing, and encouraging Douglas!

Please write me, on receipt of this, and let me know if you have any recent news from Madison. Every place seems to be coming quite up to my expectation, except Madison.

Springfield,

Dear Sir:

Feb. 9, 1860

Yours of the 7th. was not received till this morning. You seem to mistake, somewhat, the object of my last letter to you. I wished you here for no object but to try to settle the difficulty between you & Judd, which I thought there would be a better chance of doing if I could have you both near me at the same time. I selected the meeting of the Committee because that would bring Judd here at any rate, and would furnish an outside reason for your being here; and not because I wished, or expected you to interfere with the business of the Committee in any way. I repeat, I am anxious to have that difficulty settled, so that both you and he can prove square in the cause and not be expending your strength in fighting one another. In your paper of December 10th you said what ought to almost, if not quite satisfy Judd, if it were said distinctly from everything else, and placed upon the record. I propose the following: you write, sign and place on the files of the court the following—"I have made no reflections upon Mr. Judd, morally, socially, pecuniarily, professionally, and in no other way, save" politically; and if I have used language capable of different construction, I have not intended it, and now retract it.

Upon which, Judd, to continue the suit till after the Presidential election, at which time I to dismiss the suit, if, in my judgment, both you and he have, in the mean time, in good faith, let one another alone. I mean you are to let him alone, both in and out of your paper; and that he is to let you alone, both in and out of the Press & Tribune. Let the papers, as such contend with one another on measures of policy as much as they like; but John Wentworth and N. B. Judd to be absolutely let alone in both of them.

Write me what you think of it. I think both you and he ought to do it. I have not time now to say more about a nomination on the National ticket; than that I thank you for your kind suggestions and expressions; and that I will try to write you a letter more fully about it soon.

Capt. Gurden Chapin, who was dismissed from the Army on the discovery of a letter written by him promising his father to resign and join the South, at a certain time and place, presents himself, and asks to be re-instated. He asks this, because he did not resign at the time promised, having already determined to not do so; and has since done good service, and been under fire on one occasion.

My view of all this class of cases is

First. We need all the educated military talent we can get.

Second. It [is] our interest to have as little of it as possible go to the enemy.

Third. That officers (and especially young ones, as Capt. Chapin is) who have been dismissed, even on good cause prima facie, and Washington, Dec. 4, 1862.

You see by the enclosed letter what is sought for Capt. Thaddeous P. Mott. I personally remember seeing him in the Artillery service, in the Autumn of 1861, and hearing him spoken of in terms of great praise by several high officers, including: I think, General McClellan. If he can consistently be assigned a position suitable to him, I shall be gratified.

Washington May 1, 1863

Herewith, endorsed upon a letter, is a copy of your order or note of March 11, 1863, in relation to dismissing Col. David R. Haggard, of the 5th Kentucky Cavalry. You based your recommendation for his dismissal on the grounds of physical disability. There must be some mistake about this. He is one of the strongest and vigorous looking men I have seen; and intimate acquaintances of his, of undoubted veracity, assure me he is really so. They also assure me he has no single habit tending to impair his health; and that, with all, he is one of the most unconditionally devoted men to our cause; and that his dismissal, while unjust to him, is a matter of discouragement to the true men of his acquaintance. I therefore think that to send him to you, hoping that on a personal interview you will think it proper for him to be restored. Please see and hear him. I take this course because I am strongly impressed that the alleged cause of dismissal does not exist, and yet because I do not wish to force an officer upon you against your will.

Proposed Amendments to the Treasury Circular of July 1863¹

Proposed amendments to the Treasury Department circular of July, 1863.

1. There shall be at New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and such other points as the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, depots for receiving, storing, and selling at auction, all cotton, sugar, and other articles, which may be brought to them for that purpose, from beyond the United States military lines.
2. All such cotton, sugar, and other articles, shall be allowed to come through said lines to said depots, without let or hindrance.
3. There shall be an agent for each of said depots, appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and to give sufficient bond and surety, whose duty it shall be to receive, safely store, and sell at auction on Monday of each week, at such depot, all complete lots of such cotton, sugar, and other articles, as he may then have on hand, keeping accurate accounts of the whole, substantially as is done in the Storage & Commission business.

4. Such auction sales shall be open to all competitors; shall be made in such parcels as to bring the best price; and green backs alone shall be received in payment.

5. Of the proceeds of each lot, the agent shall, first, retain as compensation, such sum as is usual by the custom of merchants in similar cases; secondly, shall pay the government tax and dues, according to existing laws and regulations; thirdly, shall pay to the party delivering, on taking the oath of December 8th 1863; in green backs only, one moiety of the remainder; and fourthly, shall pay into the Treasury of the United States the remaining moiety, giving the name of the party delivering; and all this with the pledge of the government that, on the return of peace, and full practical restoration of the authority of the Union, the party delivering, having faithfully kept said oath, shall receive, without interest, the sum so paid into said Treasury.

¹ DNA RG56 (General Records, Department of the Treasury). AB Letters Received, Secretary's Office, 1861-1864. The editors are indebted to Mr. Timothy Connelly, Archivist, National Archives, for bringing to their attention the existence of this document. He wrote in a letter dated June 28, 1989:

"This document has been bound into a volume whose spine bears the title, 'AB. 1863-64: Secretary's Office.' This volume belongs to the series, Letters Received from Executive Officers ('AB' Series), which is part of the General Records of the Department of the Treasury, Record Group 56.

"Unfortunately, it is not possible to identify with certainty the circular to which the proposed amendments relate. It appears to me that this document may well be a Treasury Department circular of July 3, 1863, which is among the Circulars Sent with Related Papers ('T' Series), and is bound into a volume labeled, 'Miscellaneous--Not in Regular Arrangement, 1861-1869,' in the General Records of the Treasury Department. This circular relates to the disposition of abandoned, captured, commercial, and confiscable property in insurrectionary areas. Moreover, it seems to be the only July, 1863, document in this group of circulars to which the proposed amendments could have been addressed."

To Mrs. J. J. Neagle¹

[February 13, 1864]

I have carefully read your letter, herewith returned. As I understand it your husbands offense was that he knowingly and willfully helped a rebel to get out of our lines to the enemy to join in fighting and killing our people, and that he did this for love of you. You pretend, nevertheless, that you and he are loyal, and you may really think so, but this is a view of loyalty which it is difficult to conceive that any sane person could take, and one which the government may not tolerate and hope to live—And even now, what is the great anxiety of you and your husband to get to Washington but to get into a better position to repeat this species of loyalty? There is certainly room enough North of the Susquehanna for a great variety of honest occupations.
